

Virtual Crisis Response & Community Support Services

For decades, MindWise has helped people recover from the overwhelming stress caused by traumatic events, such as natural disasters, serious accidents, suicide, homicides, and more.

Our diverse team of licensed mental health clinicians, paramedics, peer specialists, and trauma clinicians has expertise in acute trauma, sudden or violent death, and traumatic grief. We have served thousands of communities, schools, health and human services providers, organizations, government agencies, workplaces, and individuals. We tailor our responses to the unique needs of your community and the tragedy that's affected them.

Our Process

Consultation

Our trained responders will help you through each stage of a crisis, including support for administrators and staff and creating an action plan.

Group Support

Utilizing Post-Traumatic Stress Management (PTSM) techniques, we offer structured and supportive Coping Groups to help your community process their reactions and recover.

1 on 1 Support

Utilizing Psychological First Aid (PFA), our team uses a non-clinical setting to stabilize the individual, discuss their experience, and talk about how to care for themselves.

Individuals are offered up to 3 support sessions. If our clinicians find the individual needs longer-term support, we'll refer them to the appropriate services.

To contact us after an immediate crisis or incident, please call our 24-Hour Crisis Response line at 781.433.0672, press 2, and ask to speak to a Trauma Center Manager.

Virtual Crisis Response and Community Support Services are available hourly ($250+ per hour, per responder and program) or by monthly retainer. For more information, email Becky Blackler, MindWise Director of Growth, at rblackler@mindwise.org.
